

BREAKING A SCHOOL RULE

Starting story with a speech related to the story! 😊

"Su Ling," the teacher asked, "may I put you in charge of the class while I go to the toilet?" Su Ling nodded her head diligently. Her teacher instructed her students to read their books silently before she stepped out of the door.

Hyperboles: exaggerated statements for a vivid impression! 😊

What seemed to be an eternity later, Tom's stomach started growling. The ten-year-old-boy was so famished that he could eat a whole horse! He ransacked his bag and found his all-time favorite potato chips! He ravenously ate up the potato chips as he read his book. The echoes of his munching were like thunder in a cage amidst the silence. As Su Ling turned her head, her jaw dropped to the floor. Tom was breaking a school rule! Her eyes flashed, and she confronted him on his disobedient act.

Brilliant vocabulary choice! 😊

Beautiful sound imagery using simile! 😊

Describing and portraying emotions - a staple in any story! 😊

At the window, Su Ling caught a glimpse of a shadow lurking at the corner. "Tom! What on earth happened!" his teacher shrieked, eyeing the crumbs of potato chips. Su Ling dutifully explained the situation to her. An angry frown creased the teacher's forehead. She confiscated the tantalising chips from Tom and dropped it into the bin. Expecting to be impaled by the strict figure, Tom begged for mercy. After his teacher notified Tom's parents, he got his food portion for lunch minimized.

"When will my ordeal end?" questioned Tom. After this torture, the once-bitten-twice-shy Tom vowed to obey the school rules rather than getting himself into deep trouble. This experience definitely left Tom badly shaken.

A satisfying conclusion showing how characters are changed by an experience! 😊

Written by Goh Min Xuan, P3