

SINGAPORE IS MY HOME

Starting story with a short impactful sentence! 😊

Singapore is my home!

Singapore...The first time I heard of Singapore was when I was four years old (I think)! However, I did not know what "Singapore" meant to me back then. It was only when I was about six did I realise what Singapore meant to me. I recalled my mother telling me I was born in Singapore. She said that made me a Singaporean.

Smart use of character's thoughts to highlight the story's topic! 😊

Terrific use of repetition to emphasize Singapore's many attractions! 😊

That year, my parents brought me overseas for a holiday. They showed me my first red passport with my photo in it. I was extremely elated and squealed with delight. After a few days overseas, I realised I missed my home. Although I was excited about the trip and my first plane ride, I missed a lot of things back home. I missed the food such as satay, laksa, chicken rice, and many more. I also missed the cleanliness and the greenery in Singapore. Most importantly, I missed my friends in Singapore, I couldn't wait to go back to Singapore, my home!

Excellent choice of vocabulary! 😊

Applying experiences to other events! 😊

Now when I celebrate National Day, I know that I am celebrating Singapore's birthday. I am glad that I am a part of Singapore and it will always be my beloved home.

A satisfying conclusion showing how character has learnt to appreciate Singapore as his home! 😊
